EDITORS PREFACE.

EDITORS PREFACE.

The single end of this book is the presentation, in a compact and convenient form, of the more important facts, votes, resolves atters, speeches, reports and other documents, which elucidate the political contest now agitating this country. It has been out into let every candidate and other important personage speak for himself, make his own platform, and vindicate (if he may his own consistency and the soundness of his views on the great questions which underlie our current positics.

Of course, such a work can have but a comparative merit. Wake it ever so large, and still many things must be omitted that the compiler would wish to insert: and every critic will plausibly ask, "Why insert this and omit that? Why give so much of A and so little of B ?" Besidea, it is not always possible to remember, or, if remembered, to find, all that would be valed in a work hite this. We can only say that we have done our to remember, or, if remembered, to find, all that would be valued in a work hise this. We can only say that we have done our best: let him do better who can.

Inaccuracy of citation is one of the chief vices of our political discessions. You can hardly listen to a set speech, even from a well-informed and truthful convasser, which is not marred by some mis-apprehension or unconscious misstatement of the position and views of this or that promment statesman. Documents, heedlessly read and long since lost or mislaid, are quoted from with fluency and conndence, as though with industitable accuracy, when the citations so made do gross injustice to their so toor, and tend to mislead the hearer. We believe the documents collected in this work are so grinted that their general socuracy may be safely relied on.

By cauvaseers of all parties, we trust our Text-Book will be found convenient, not to say indispensable. But those who only listen, and read, and reflect, will also find it a manifest help to a clear understanding of the issues and contentions of the day. They will be interested in comparing the accuse positions asken by Sir. Lincoln, or Mr Dongias, or Gen. Cass, or Mr Everett, as faithfulls set forth in this work, with those confidently stributed to that statesn an in the fluent havangue of some political opponent, who is intent on blazoning is inconsistency or proving his ir-sincerity. To verify and correct the citations of a frothy declaimer is sometimes the easiest and most convincing refutation of his speech

There is not a farmer of any party or of none who can read this pamphlet without signal instruction and profit, no matter though he should dissent from that view of Political Economy and National Policy which it inculentes. Never was the ruinous nature of that system of Agriculture which grows a few rade, bulky staples for a distant market more vividly exhibited than in this tract, while no ordinary farmer can read it without at least resolving and sceing how to be a better farmer than he has ever yet been. We beg our friends everywhere to order at least a specimen of this tract, for we are sure they cannot read it without wishing their neighbors to do likewise.
